

“I carefully listen to what patients have to tell me and try to understand their point.”

About Tomasz Kobylanski, MD, FACP, FHM

Dr. Tomasz Kobylanski chose to pursue a career in medicine “to help sick people to get better and live longer.” His favorite part of being a physician is “talking to patients and optimizing their medical care.” He aims to “reduce polypharmacy.” He explains, “Not every problem needs to be medicated.” He likes taking his time during patient encounters. “I carefully listen to what patients have to tell me and try to understand their point,” he explains. He is passionate about providing seniors excellent care. “I will take really good care of them and their family,” he says.

In his free time, Dr. Kobylanski loves staying active through sports, walking, and biking. He also enjoys spending time with his grown children and their dogs.
