“I get to know my patients very well, not just in terms of their health but also personally. I treat all of my patients as I would someone from my family—with kindness, patience, and respect.”

About Sanwar Boyal, MD

Volunteering at a local hospital sparked Dr. Sanwar Boyal’s interest in healthcare. “I chose to be a doctor to be able to help those who need it most,” he says. He explains, “My favorite part of being a family doctor is getting to know my patients personally and building relationships with them over time.” He adds, “I get to know my patients very well, not just in terms of their health but also personally. I treat all of my patients as I would someone from my family—with kindness, patience, and respect.” He finds it “incredibly fulfilling” to care for his senior patients.

In his free time, Dr. Boyal enjoys staying active by hiking and walking his dog. He also enjoys traveling and collecting mugs from museums.
