“My favorite part is building long-term relationships with patients and their families.”

About Varinder Singh, MD, FAAFP

Dr. Varinder Singh knew at a young age that she wanted to be a doctor, accrediting her passion for helping others and serving as a role model for her community. “My favorite parts are building long-term relationships with patients and their families and making patients’ discomfort go away,” she says. She enjoys making “ a meaningful difference” in the lives of her patients, particulary seniors, “by providing compassionate care.” She strives to empower patients “to lead a more independent life.” She explains, “I listen to my patients’ history and concerns and make a plan that is best and doable for my patients.”

In her free time, Dr. Singh can be found hiking with her family, playing with her cat, or volunteering at an animal shelter.
