“I always had a soft spot for helping people.”

About Chiqilla McCoy, FNP-BC

Chiqilla McCoy knew at a young age that she wanted to be a nurse. “I always had a soft spot for helping people,” she explains. She strives to treat patients with compassion and loves making them laugh. “They are not in this alone. I am with them every step of the way,” she says. The senior population holds a special place in her heart, particularly due to being raised by her grandparents. “I was always around my grandmother and her friends,” she explains. She loves spending her free time with her children. Although she considers herself a “homebody,” she also likes exploring new foods and cultures.

Chiqilla McCoy proudly served as a Supply Specialist in the US Army for six-and-a-half years, including fifteen months in Iraq.
