

“I have a strong admiration and respect for our geriatric population.”

About Daniel Carl Cochran, DO

Dr. Dan Carl Cochran has always loved connecting with and reaching out to people. “I have a strong admiration and respect for our geriatric population.” He explains, “I find it important to remember that people have lived through a lot and deserve respect in our medical community.” He aims to be approachable and encourages patients to be active in the decision-making surrounding their care. “I want patients to feel free to ask me questions,” he says. He strives to be available to patients and explains that in his practice, patients are always “heard and respected.”

When not caring for patients, Dr. Dan can be found enjoying quality time with family and friends. He also loves spending time outdoors, especially at the beach.
