“I know what I know, but much importantly, I know what I do not know. Those things? We can figure out together.”

About Farah Fakouri, MD

Dr. Farah Fakouri considers it both an “honor” and a “privilege to help patients become healthier. She explains, “After 34 years in medicine, I still love it.” She treats all patients with respect and dignity and emphasizes the importance of “meeting each patient where they live, metaphorically and sometimes literally.” She actively listens to her patients and views her relationship with them as collaborative. “I know what I know, but much importantly, I know what I do not know. Those things? We can figure out together,” she says.

In her down time, Farah enjoys a variety of hobbies, including skiing, reading, cooking, and gardening. She also loves playing card games and watching live theatre performances.
