“It's not just about prescribing medicines, but about prescribing the right medicines.”

About Keerthi Padooru, MD

Dr. Keerthi Padooru was drawn to medicine by a love of science and a deep desire to serve people and earn their trust. "I wanted to do something different — something where my efforts made a real difference," she says. Growing up in a family of engineers, she charted her own path and never looked back. Dr. Padooru builds relationships by doing what matters most — listening. "Patients trust physicians who listen to them without rushing," she says. She believes strongly in educating her patients about their conditions and encouraging shared decision-making, so they feel like true partners in their care.

Dr. Padooru approaches treatment with thoughtfulness and precision — prescribing evidence-based medicine while carefully considering side effects, patient age, and cost-effectiveness. "It's not just about prescribing medicines, but about prescribing the right medicines," she says. Her commitment to her patients shows in the results — long-term relationships, consistent follow-ups, and patients who keep coming back. "I am soft, humble, and a good listener," she says.

When not with patients, Dr. Padooru enjoys spending time with her family and children, cooking, traveling, watching movies, and reading books.
