“I treat my patients to the best of my knowledge and abilities so they can enjoy more good days with their loved ones.”

About Camille Lindo-Wilson, MSN, FNP

Camille Lindo-Wilson was inspired to care for seniors by her own grandparents — and has been dedicated to that calling for over 30 years. Her journey began in home health as a home health aide, expanding through nursing homes and hospital settings before she pursued advanced education in gerontology. "These experiences in my career path inspired me to further my knowledge and education," she says. For Camille, great care is built on excellent communication, trust, and speaking truth with love. "I treat my patients to the best of my knowledge and abilities so they can enjoy more good days with their loved ones," she says.

Camille's patients see her not just as their healthcare provider, but as a sister, friend, and family member. She takes a deeply personal approach — celebrating her patients' successes, honoring the experiences that have shaped their lives, and treating every individual with the same care she would give her own family. "I take my patients' wellbeing very seriously," she says.

When not with patients, Camille loves traveling, spending time with family, exploring historical monuments, experiencing different cultures, and trying new recipes.
